

QUARANTINE WORK IN THE PHILIPPINES.

In his annual report of the operations of the quarantine service in the Philippines for the period ending July 31st last, Captain V. G. Hise of the U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service states that it is particularly creditable to the officers on duty in China and Japan that notwithstanding that plague has been epidemic at Hongkong and Amoy during the year, and present at other ports in those countries, not a single case of this disease found in Manila could be traced to infection from without. This fact is particularly noteworthy because the plague at Hongkong and Amoy has been epidemic, and these ports are only two and three days' sail respectively from Manila. It is also a matter for congratulation that the plague has been confined to Manila. So far the other ports in the Philippines have not become infected. Much of the success in the management of the plague is, no doubt, due to the mutual co-operation between the Board of Health and the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. An effort has been made to fumigate with sulphur for the purpose of killing rats and vermin the entire shipping which enters the port of Manila. This work has been almost accomplished, there being very few vessels that have not been fumigated at least once. The Board of Health has kept a force of rat catchers along the water front, and fumigated with sulphur all the smaller vessels which are engaged in river and harbour work. During the year 163 vessels were fumigated at Manila for which purpose about twenty tons of sulphur was used.

On the whole we have had the hearty co-operation of the shipping interests in this work; in addition to the destruction of rats, the destruction of cockroaches and other vermin on board vessels was very agreeable to them. The work so far has been accomplished with practically no delay or loss to shipping. It has been the custom heretofore to suggest to the steamship companies not to bring steerage passengers during that portion of the year in which plague was at its height in Hongkong and Amoy. This suggestion has always been complied with in the past. This year a different course was pursued. It was found that abolishing the steerage accommodations for the time being resulted in that class of passengers engaging cabin accommodations. This made the last condition worse than the first because they avoided thereby the measures which would have been employed had they been allowed to come as steerage passengers.

The method of procedure this year has been, whenever possible, to detain them under medical observation for seven days at the port of embarkation, and after bathing them and disinfecting their effects they are permitted to proceed to Manila. Upon their arrival here they are again bathed and their effects disinfected. If they made no objection the Board of Health injected them with Shiga serum before landing. In summing the matter up, however, it is probably safe to say that the principal factor in dealing with the plague was that the rats and vermin were destroyed in the vessels before the plague epidemic began and then kept free from vermin since that time. The same course has been pursued at the other port of entry in the Islands.

Two vessels which were lying in the Harbour were reported to us by the Board of Health as having had a case of plague on board. Those vessels were remanded to Manila and thoroughly disinfected and held to complete the incubation period of the disease. No further cases developed on either vessel. The length of time that the vessels had been in Philippine waters shows that the disease no doubt was contracted in Manila.

EDUCATION IN CHINA.

III.

As the next principal count in our indictment of Chinese education it may be maintained that the spirit of Chinese scholarship is fundamentally wrong. The habit of the scholar should be one of hopefulness. He should look onward and upward, not downward and backward. He should believe in humanity. Faith in humanity will cause him to have faith in the future. He will confidently expect better things, brighter days for the race than it has yet realized. His ideals, his goal will be ahead. He will have enthusiasm, will press towards his mark, and will accomplish something that will have a public value. He will move somewhere, and society will move along with him. General advancement will result. China's civilization is essentially hopeless, and that is the secret of her failure. She has faith only in the past. The present is degenerate; the future is without promise. This is the essence of the spirit of inertia which must be displaced by a desire to improve before there can be any real hope for China. Moreover, the scholar should be characterized by sincerity, by intellectual honesty. Whatever allowance may be made for insecurity in a politician, scholarship demands a strict regard for the truth. No one for a moment supposes that the studies of a Chinese scholar are marked by a disinterested longing after truth. What does he care about truth? What does he know about it? What is truth? What he wants to be positively certain about is that he has in memory the very identical words of the sages, that his interpretation of the same does not vary perceptibly from that handed down by the oldest commentators, that his essays may be laid before the judges in examination faultless in diction, style, and formation of characters. These things attained, what more is there left to be desired? Truth is not the scholar's goal. It is political preferment that he is in pursuit of. No solid advance in real learning can be made by the Chinese until they are ready, at least in the case of those who presume to teach, to sacrifice every consideration of a different character in the interests of what can be known and proven to be the truth. Another glaring defect of the present system of education is the extreme arrogance of Chinese scholarship. The exaggerated estimate of the respect due to everything pertaining to Chinese literature produces and encourages a supercilious and stilted spirit among its devotees. Scraps of paper with written or printed characters on, that through accident or carelessness have fallen on the ground are religiously recovered by paper-pickers, who accumulate merit by preventing these being trampled under foot. Books are revered and scholars are treated with a deference amounting to servility. The man who can read and write these almost sacred characters is a sort of demi-god, whom ordinary humanity was made to serve. The teacher maintains this attitude of lofty superiority over his pupils. He is not their friend and helper; he is their ruler, for the time being; and they are his abject servants. He is lofty, uncondescending, oracular. As a consequence he makes no effort to simplify his subject, to make it interesting, to make learning as easy as possible of acquisition. Rather the effort is to make it as difficult as possible, so that all but the most talented and brilliant may be speedily eliminated from the contest for governmental honours. The idea of a general diffusion of knowledge by means of a helpful system of schools and a corps of trained teachers is entirely foreign to the official Chinese conception. When a misguided Emperor begins to move in this direction he is promptly dethroned and his ill-advised counselors are either beheaded or driven into banishment. Knowledge is something high that must be struggled up to. It cannot come down to the level of everyday affairs. If men are ruined in the making it is the fault of their defective constitution, not of sacred knowledge. And after all it is a matter of small consequence so long as by this severe sifting process, the nation's best brains are secured to act in the capacity of rulers. Accordingly, the first thing a Chinese school-master proceeds to do with a bright, active lad who comes under his jurisdiction is to make a heavy-eyed, sedate, stupid little blockhead of him. If he has a disposition to think and to express himself, he must at all hazards be taught to stop thinking and to repress himself. This process, continued long enough, evolves that marvellous combination of conceit and inefficiency, called a Chinese scholar. The scope of Chinese education, like that of all despotism, is defective. The world is contracting to such an extent, the necessary intercommunications of the nations are becoming so varied and constant, that each is acquiring a right to make certain demands of the other. The vices and follies of each are a menace to all the others. Popular ignorance is degrading and contaminating, and when the earth gets small enough the nation that tries, in the interests of a tyrannous rule, to keep knowledge from the common people will be made the subject of complaint by her neighbour nations. It is so to some extent to-day. It is this principle which is at the root of all Chinese exclusion acts by civilized countries. These are the protest of civilization against the limitations that Chinese officialdom is putting on its own people. It will be increasingly so as years go on. China, which has had such a reputation for popular education, has in fact no popular education at all. The theory of her system ignores altogether the whole population except the very small class of prospective officials. Female education is done away with at a single sweep. There is no provision for it in the national order. The exceptional instances of it which do exist do so by virtue of the Chinaman's unusual faculty for inconsistency, in this case certainly allowing him occasionally a laudable departure for his traditions and the general practice of his countrymen. And of all the men all that the system cares for is the education of the relatively few individuals who are to act as rulers. What little schooling the remainder get is of little value as a practical fitting for life duties, unless an exception is made in the case of school-masters, who, as has been said, are as a rule disappointed or expectant candidates for examination honours. But who ever thinks of a Chinaman's schooling making him a better business man, or farmer, or mechanic, or public-minded citizen? Such things are not contemplated by the Chinese system. Practically, therefore, the great industrial and trading fraternities and the whole female sex are left out in the cold by this hoary and much over-praised system of education, framed exclusively with reference to a privileged class. You have, in consequence, a nation full of ignorant wives, mothers and sisters; where home life and home training are conspicuously absent; where the worst that is in man comes unchecked to the surface, for lack of the restraining and refining influence of a chivalric instinct, which has found in woman that which commands respect and love. There is, too, everywhere, an amazing amount of unfitness for the various occupations of life. Society has set low standards and the people do not rise above them. Society has practically said that the art of ruling is the only one that requires to be taught. Nothing else is of sufficient importance to require teaching. On every other subject,—on medicine, home-keeping, art, business, manufacturing, improvements, in fact everything belonging to the life of the common people, it is assumed that sufficient knowledge can be picked up incidentally, or by a brief apprenticeship, to enable men to do them as well as they need to be done. Europe and America are engaged in a strenuous effort to fit, by well adapted educational methods, the masses who must work for a living to do their work in the best and most efficient way, and with most profit to themselves. The exclusion acts, viewed from one side, are a willing sacrifice of the rich and powerful employers of labour in the interests of the labourer, protecting him against a debasing cheap scale of wages, with all the material and moral loss that grinding poverty entails. In China the poor masses of working men are left to shift for themselves. Can we wonder that along all these lines of popular prosperity China is to-day so far behind the rest of the world? And it will continue to be so just so long as she narrows the scope of her education to a few picked men who are to rule and ignores the mass of her people, including all of her women.

THE GOVERNOR OF FRENCH INDU-CHINA.

In our issue of the 17th ultimo we published an editorial announcing and commenting upon the return of M. Beau to Paris and his probable supersession by M. Pierre Baudin. Though, at the time, our statements were denied by several of our French correspondents in Indo-China, the information we had tendered was confirmed on the 25th August by a wire from Reuters' Agent in Paris; and additional weight has been given to it by a similar announcement which appears in the columns of our senior local contemporary this morning. We may add that we have serious reasons for believing that, in consequence of the important changes which will shortly take place in the administrative staff of the neighbouring French colony, a broader and more liberal commercial policy will most probably be adopted there.

At the Magistracy this afternoon two natives were charged with stealing ten cows and a bullock, the property of a farmer at Mui Ham. The theft took place on the night of the 18th inst., when, it was declared, the prisoners forced an entrance into the cowshed and, after having bound the owner, drove away the cattle, which they attempted to sell in Hongkong on the 20th. The farmer declared that several men took part in the robbery and identified a lad of eighteen, who was brought into Court with five other natives, as the one who had bound him. The lad was consequently placed in the dock with the two other prisoners. The hearing of the case had not finished when we went to press.

DR. James n has forwarded to The Times the originals of two letters, dated May, 1891, found among the papers of the late Cecil Rhodes. The first letter was addressed to the then Premier of Canada, asking: "Can we invent some tie with the motherland that will prevent separation?" "The curse is," the letter went on, "English politicians think Britain will always be the world's manufacturing mart, and fail to understand what protection, coupled with reciprocal relations means." The second letter invited the co-operation of the late Sir Henry P. Jones in securing from the motherland preferential consideration for colonial products as a means of maintaining the Imperial connection.

HONGKONG.

CABLE ADDRESS.—Telegraph, Hongkong.

THE leading English Newspaper in China

Also widely circulated in Japan, Cochín China, Ceylon, India and the Far East generally.A daily newspaper with weekly edition
published for despatch by the homeward mail
The daily is recommended as more generally suitable, except for subscribers in Europe or America.A special feature is made of full and accurate reports of local occurrences, and of matters of general interest.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

The Hongkong Telegraph is the best medium for advertising in China. It circulates largely among all classes of the community, is the largest daily newspaper and has a wider circulation than any journal in the Far East.Special attention given to effectively displaying advertisements.The type used as a standard for setting advertisements is similar to this, unless we are instructed to display the advertisement, when any effective style of type will be adopted.
This standard runs exactly eight lines to the inch, and about eight words to the line.

WEATHER FORECASTS AND

STORM WARNINGS ISSUED

FROM THE HONGKONG

OBSERVATORY.

METEOROLOGICAL SIGNALS.

Meteorological signals are hoisted on the mast beside the Time-ball at Kowloon Point for the information of masters of vessels leaving the port. They do not imply that bad weather is expected here—A DRUM indicates a typhoon to the Eastward of the Colony, (i.e., in the East quadrant, N.E. to S.E.)A BALL indicates a typhoon to the Westward of the Colony, (i.e., in the West quadrant, S.W. to N.W.)A CONE Point Upwards indicates a typhoon to the Northward of the Colony, (i.e., in the North quadrant, N.W. to N.E.)A CONE Point Downwards indicates a typhoon to the Southward of the Colony,
(i.e., in the South quadrant, S.E. to S.W.)Red Signals indicate that the centre is believed to be more than 300 miles away from the Colony.Black Signals indicate that the centre is believed to be less than 300 miles away from the Colony.

NIGHT SIGNALS.

Two lanterns hoisted vertically indicate bad weather in the Colony; and that the wind is expected to veer.Two lanterns hoisted horizontally indicate bad weather in the Colony; and that the
